

Reasons for Dismissing a Patient

Noncompliance with Treatment Plans

If a patient consistently fails to follow the recommended treatment plans, it can jeopardize their health and the dentist's ability to provide effective care.

Missed appointments

Missing appointments repeatedly or canceling at the last minute can disrupt the practice's schedule and affect other patients.

Financial Issues

Failure to pay services or adhere to payment agreements.

Behavioral Problems

Hostile, belligerent, or unacceptable behavior towards the dental staff or other patients.

Lack of Trust

If a patient loses confidence in their dentist's abilities, it can undermine the treatment process and the overall dentist-patient relationship.

The dismissal of a patient must be handled professionally and ethically. The process must ensure the patient's ongoing care is not compromised.
